An Overview of

Winston-Salem State University

Winston-Salem, North Carolina

Just as a profile pictures only one view of a person's face, so an overview of a university reflects only a piece of life on that campus. Winston-Salem State is a multi-faceted university, encouraging both academic excellence and social maturity. Combining current needs with future goals, our approach goes beyond the four years of campus life to incorporate the reexamined principles of education so that they might be more relevant to the total development of our student.

Set on a hill overlooking downtown Winston-Salem, the university is part of an active cultural center in the Piedmont area of North Carolina. With Wake Forest University, Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Salem College, and the N.C. School of the Arts located in this same center, Winston-Salem State participates in a variety of exchange programs with these schools, providing even more opportunity for cultural and civic education.

The campus itself combines the old and new. Modern structures, like K. R. Williams Auditorium and the new girl's dorm, blend with the traditional architecture on this rapidly growing 65 acre tract. Even the structural changes reflect this university's desire to educate the whole person.

Bringing over two thousand unique individuals from diverse backgrounds and locations together, Winston-Salem State is conscious of their responsibility to each of these students. Involving themselves in all aspects of the student's development, the university begins by offering counseling during this initial adjustment period, easing the way for becoming part of the university family. Student services provide, not only counseling and job placement assistance, but a 'home away from home' atmosphere. The campus is a complete community within itself, with a bookstore, beauty and barber shop, dry cleaners, bank, student union, and a variety of recreational areas.

Dorm life, varsity and intramural sports, sororities and fraternities, academic clubs and organizations are all part of the directed educational process. Encouraging student participation, Winston-Salem State again asserts the basic principles of education — preparing our students for participation in a changing world, guiding them in a wholesome use of leisure time, and making it possible for them to become active and responsible citizens.

Realizing the impact of these four years at Winston-Salem State on the life of each student, the university strives for excellence in their academic programs. With over twenty available majors, ranging from nursing and urban affairs to teacher education and music, the student may choose a very liberal education or may concentrate in a specialized area. A fifteen to one student/faculty ratio enables each student to receive personal guidance and to participate in smaller classroom situations.

Academic preparedness is the key to the future. With this in mind, the university assists the student as he makes curricular and vocational decisions. Always aware of the total person, the university seeks to provide a balance of the principles of education so that the healthy individual has, not only knowledge, but the ability to use that knowledge, the curiosity to continually expand it, the integrity to use it wisely, and the desire to use it in making a better world.

THE 1977 RAM WINSTON-SALEM STATE UNIVERSITY

Winston-Salem, North Carolina

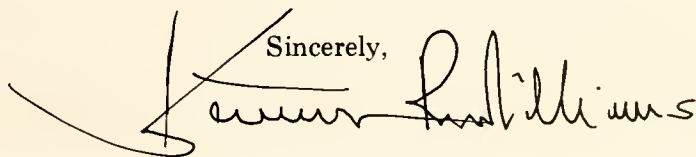

Dear Seniors:

Tempus fugit (time flies). This was the first sentence that I learned in Latin I as a freshman high school student. I did not appreciate the significance of that sentence then. I was not concerned with the truth of it.

Time does fly. This appears to be something that more people recognize during the years immediately following college than any time during their lives. New responsibilities, duties and obligations, along with all of the experiences that come with being on one's own, absorb most of our energy. Days, months, even years seem to rush by us. Old friends may be forgotten. Old experiences are pushed farther into the background.

It is our sincere hope that this book will enable you to keep memories of your days at Winston-Salem State alive and that it will inspire you to retain the wholesome friendships of your college days. It may remind you of some real struggles, perhaps even disappointments. We trust that most of all, it will enable you to recall some of the happiest moments of the early part of your lives.

We will follow your continued growth and development with special pride.

Sincerely,

Kenneth R. Williams
Chancellor

The 1977 RAM
Dedicated to
Kenneth R. Williams,
Chancellor of Winston-Salem
State University
1961-1977

It has been four long and exciting years, though not without the ups and downs so prevalent in campus life. How good it was to realize that amid the confusion and progress, there remained that one rallying point, that guiding light, that one spark of wisdom and patience. Without it, we could have done nothing but falter and lose ourselves. In dedicating this 1977 edition of THE RAM to our Chancellor, Kenneth R. Williams, we acknowledge the strength, guidance, wisdom, and patience that he has provided for us all. As we recognize his true greatness, we honor him for his numerous accomplishments, for his service to the University, and for his many contributions to community, state, and national organizations.

In Appreciation of . . .

John A. Fountain, Advisor

Of what value is the ship without a captain, a plane without a pilot, a staff without a leader? We as a group are fortunate, for we possess a unique personality. He has patiently learned as he taught and willingly followed as he led. The result is this, our 1976 edition of The Ram. With it, we offer our appreciation to Mr. John A. Fountain for his aid in making this book what it truly is, a picture of Winston-Salem State University.

Beauford O. Bailey

Roland S. Watts

In view of their tremendous efforts and cooperation, The Ram Staff would like to express its sincere gratitude to Masters Bailey, Watts, and Murrell and Miss Cassandra Douglas. Thank you for the numerous hours you sacrificed in loyalty and dedication.
